Dr. Hull will describe the community-engaged development and testing of SISTA-P, a Black women-specific HIV prevention intervention that is grounded in Social Cognitive Theory and Intersectionality. SISTA-P focuses on self-care activities for Black women to increase their knowledge of and recognition of pre-exposure prophylaxis (PrEP) use as self-care, and increase their PrEP uptake. SISTA-P also trains women to increase their efficacy and skills for overcoming social-structural barriers to PrEP uptake.
